

Select the true statement about the Object class.

Object is an interface.

All types include Object at the top of their inheritance hierarchy.

Every type has a single superclass: Object.

A type only inherits from Object if it is explicitly included in the type definition.

Correct!

Continue